Commissioners:

Late this morning at the 11:00 O'clock meeting when I made a few brief comments to you, I wish I had remembered to mention that the problem of many people failing to distinguish between the Growth Policy and Zoning has been exacerbated by George Corn.

He had the task of stating (according to statute) in 25 words or less on the ballot the consequences of repealing the Growth Policy. He chose to use those words to specify only zoning, no other consequences, even though he was shown in 23 words how repeal would have more consequences than merely precluding zoning (e.g. open space planning, US 93 corridor). That's no more helpful than Alex Beal would have been.

In my view, George Corn wants the public to equate zoning and nothing else with the Growth Policy. Instead of helping he has simply exacerbated the problem all of you are trying to resolve.
